THE most sobering fact that emerges from the Government statement on the Joint Primary Six exam results yesterday is not that girls did better than boys, but that three-quarters of the 10,000 who sat failed to get promotion. And it is invariably the same story year after year because there is such a shortage of secondary school places.

Unfortunately this tends to reflect unfairly on Government's policy which aims at providing universal primary education, when what is really wrong is that all children in Government schools are led to the dizzy and somewhat terrifying climax of the Joint Primary Six with such a small chance of being promoted. So widespread frustration is the inevitable result.

THE exam is something like the British "Eleven Plus" (though its purpose is different). But what it lacks is the superstructure of secondary education that Britain possesses and it is said that on the basis of Hongkong's present policy, it will be 25 to 30 years before the Colony can offer secondary school places to anything like the number who want them.

How can Hongkong get around this problem? A newspaper correspondent, Mr. Percy Larkin, has proposed a four-year basic education course as a substitute for an expanded secondary school programme. Anglican school teachers have proposed another idea: higher primary forms should be divided into two, one for advanced students, the other for those who stand no chance of promotion after the Joint Primary Six.

The lower class, in addition to normal lessons, would be given special instruction in rudimentary carpentry, electrical work, shoe-making and other simple technical subjects, so that if students leave school after Primary Six as so many have to, they will have something to fall back on to make a living.

ANOTHER suggestion is that all Government primary schools should take children who fail to get promotion, for three more years after Primary Six, to the age of 15 or 16. In these years children could be taught technical and domestic science subjects as well as have further instruction in four basic subjects like English, Chinese, Maths, Geography or History. At the end of the third year all students would sit for a public intermediate examination which would be duly recognized by the Department of Education. These additional classes could be called Intermediate High Schools.

The advantage of this proposal is that it would ease the vast problems Government faces in mass-producing secondary schools. Surely a good half of Hongkong's children want only a diploma which would be recognized, and the basis of a secondary education to meet the needs of the average employer. Full secondary schools could then be left for those who plan a more ambitious professional career, those who want to go to University or who are aiming at a job where the school certificate or matric is the minimum requirement.

32 DIE IN AIR CRASH

Plane Carrying British Students Hits Mountain

Barcelona, Aug. 19.

A British charter airliner, carrying a load of students back to England from a Spanish vacation, crashed north of here today, killing all 32 persons aboard, according to first reports reaching here.

The twin-engined DC-3 had three crew members and 29 persons on board when it ran into Mount Montseny, 30 miles north of here.

Hongkong's Ban On Film Termed 'Stupid'

London, Aug. 19.

Commenting on the fact that the British film, "Yesterday's Enemy," had been banned in Hongkong, Col. James Carreras, who made the film said tonight, "Certainly it is an outspoken film and pretty tough. I understand that is why it has been banned. But it is a stupid decision since the theme is violently against war," and the film company executive said, "It is doing tremendous business in Japan where there has been no protest."—London Express Service.

Victory For Malaya's Ruling Alliance Party

Kuala Lumpur, Aug. 19.

Malaya's ruling Alliance Party, led by former Premier Tengku Abdul Rahman, was returned to power with a convincing majority tonight in the federation's first parliamentary elections since it won independence.

The Alliance Party has won 70 out of the 100 parliamentary seats accounted for so far.

The fate of four more seats remains to be known. Of these four, election in one constituency has been indefinitely postponed, while results of three constituencies were expected later.

The Alliance Party was expected to win at least three of the four seats still pending. The five opposition parties and independent candidates have won 30 seats among themselves.

The rightist Pan-Malayan Islamic Party has offered the main opposition, with 13 seats to its credit.

The line-up of other parties is as follows: Socialist Front—eight, People's Progressive Party—four, Negara Party—one, Malayan Party—one, Independents—three.

All contesting Cabinet Ministers, except for outgoing Premier Dato Abdul Razak, whose fate was yet unknown, and Education Minister, Inche Mohammed Khir Johari, whose fight has been postponed, have been re-elected.

The leaders of all opposition parties have also been elected. The Alliance Party's victory by a convincing majority seems to be forming about 400 miles north-east of Manila.

He said it would probably move slowly towards north Luzon. When this happens an improvement in the weather is expected. Tomorrow there should be less frequent showers, he added. Today's outlook is for occasional showers and some fair periods.

A rough passenger list released by Prat Airport officials here showed three Spaniards, 21 Britons, one Irish subject, one German, one Indian and two Iranians aboard the plane, in addition to the three crewmen.

The plane crashed shortly after taking off from Prat Airport. Ambulances and rescue teams were rushed from here the moment word reached this city, despite reports that all aboard had perished.

Clouds

An official at Prat Airport said the weather seemed good all along the route to Britain, though there may have been clouds around the 5,100-foot Mount Montseny, the chief peak in a chain of mountains of the same name.

The plane was one of a fleet operated by Transair Ltd., out of Gatwick Airport near London. It was being used to ferry British students to Spain's vacation resorts and take Spaniards to Britain.

It carried a crew of three, a pilot, co-pilot and stewardess. According to airport officials here, many of the students had flown across the Palma, Mallorca, earlier in the day, to catch the plane.

The plane crashed at about 1500 GMT, just minutes after taking off, near a meteorological station at Turis De Montseny, near the top of the mountain.

The Observatory keeper and his wife were the first on the scene of the accident.

Explosion

They said they heard a plant explosion, shortly after 4 p.m. The plane had crashed about 100 yards away.

They tried to reach the plane to search for survivors, but a series of explosions rocked the wreckage and they could not get close.

They telephoned the news to Barcelona.

"No one could have survived," they reported.

The mountain peak was shrouded in clouds though there was good weather over most of the plane's route, airport officials said.

(In London, a Transair spokesman said there were 24 British members of the National Union of Students, which chartered the plane, aboard when it crashed.)

Authoritative sources in Barcelona confirmed that there were no survivors.

Cifra said most of the passengers were between 19 and 23 years. The eldest was Father Jesus Reguan Massana, a Spanish priest, of Lerida, whose age is given as 34.

The crash is the first overseas disaster to a British civil airliner this year, and the world's worst since June 28, when a Transworld Airlines super Constellation crashed in North Italy, killing 88 people.—Uplift and Reuter.

Blind Shrimp Fisherman Gets A New Boat

The Fish Market at Aberdeen was the setting for an unusual ceremony this morning, when a blind fisherman, Wong For-yu, 32, was presented with a new boat to enable him to earn a living.

The boat was handed over to Wong by the Chairman of The Hongkong Society for the Blind, who told this story of Wong's predicament. Wong For-yu was born at Tai O and had been a fisherman until the onset of blindness ten years ago.

"Since then he has had to employ two men to help him and who shared the proceeds of their catch, so that the support of Wong's own wife, mother and small adopted son, was difficult.

Kindness

The boat then fell to pieces and had it not been for the kindness of a neighbour who lived on his dilapidated craft, the family would have had to sleep in the open and beg for a living.

Wong's plight came to the notice of the ever-vigilant District Administration, for he could not go to sea in the dilapidated boat, and therefore could not earn a living," said Mr. Terry. "They drew the attention of the Social Welfare Office to his predicament."

The Blind Welfare Section of the Social Welfare Department, with whom the Hongkong Society for the Blind works in close co-operation, naturally turned to the Society, and we were pleased to be able to allocate funds for the provision of a new boat.

"We then sought the co-operation of the Commissioner for Co-operatives in finding the right type of boat and arranging for its construction."

American Nets

"The result is the boat you see here. The shrimp nets you see on board have been donated by the American Organisation 'Committee for American Remittances Everywhere,' known as Care."

Mr. C. E. Terry presents the title of ownership of the new boat to blind fisherman Mr. Wong For-yu.—China Mail Photo.

Mr. C. E. Terry presents the title of ownership of the new boat to blind fisherman Mr. Wong For-yu.—China Mail Photo.

"This joint effort," Mr. Terry said, "is certainly an example of what the Hongkong Council of Social Service would call 'Working Together.'"

Mr. Terry in handing the formal title of sole ownership to Mr. Wong For-yu, wished him, his family and assistant good luck.

The blind fisherman made a short speech of thanks, presenting a formal letter of acknowledgment to Miss Tatiana Williams, Secretary of the Hongkong Society for the Blind.

and to Mrs. R. Kirby, who previously was Secretary of the Society, he presented a handsome package of dried shrimp, the product of Aberdeen waters.

The boat is a small shrimp junk or silver shrimp boat. It cost $550.

A fisherman with such a boat would only be able to fish Hongkong waters and during the summer season could expect to make $200 to $300, but only $100 to $200 a month in winter.

In Tai O the shrimps are made into an excellent fish paste.

France Annoyed By British Press Attacks

Paris, Aug. 19.

France-British relations are suffering because of British press attacks on France over her atomic bomb, her Algerian policy, and her diplomatic apprehension about the Eisenhower-Khrushchev exchange of visits.

A cartoon in one British newspaper comparing General de Gaulle to the Vichy Premier Pierre Laval, shot for treasonable collaboration with Germany after the liberation, has been bitterly resented in all official circles here.

The British Foreign Office has been informed of the present French feeling by its own representative.

The conservative evening paper Paris-Press today carried an eight-column banner headline on its front page, saying: "Having started off as a violent press campaign against General de Gaulle and the French atom bomb, the Anglo-

French friendship is now getting worse."

On the French side controversial articles about Britain are also getting more acid tone. "Why should France, the bulk of whose classic troops and arms are in Algeria, deprive herself of the modern weapon, of the deterrent, all the more when she has in the super-sonic Mirage IV bomber a valid means of transporting it?" asks Paris-Press.

It adds: "The British are ill-placed to accuse us of employing German scientists since their best atomic scientist was the German Klaus Fuchs (who was jailed for passing secrets to the Soviet Union)."

In the right-wing weekly Carrefour, Andre Sibilo wrote today: "Britain has never employed so much zeal in order to counteract the development of the French community of nations in black Africa..."

The present state of Franco-British relations was discussed in London today by the French Ambassador, M. Jean Chauvel, and Mr. John Profumo, Minister of State, for Foreign Affairs, official sources here confirmed.

There was no question of a French "protest" against any particular newspaper allegation, but M. Chauvel expressed the French Government's general anxiety about the possible effect of the press attacks on relations between the British and French Governments.—Reuter.

HK Seamen On Murder Charge

Georgetown, Aug. 19.

Four Hongkong seamen have been charged in Trinidad with the murder of a cabin boy, Kam Wah, aboard the vessel Hin-dustan on the high seas between Trinidad and Curacao, police disclosed today.

The four seamen were identified as Leong Ki, Lan Yip, Wong Hing, and Xiang Lang.

The cabin boy was stabbed with an 11-inch kitchen knife, on August 6, following a quarrel touched off by the manner in which tea was served that day.

The victim's body was buried in the Azores.—AFP.

A vernacular report said the woman, Miu Sheong, 44, wife of a vegetable farmer, drank from a bowl containing a mixture of insecticide and egg soup before her children who tried in vain to stop her.

The farmer's crops had been washed out and his field flooded several times during the last few days.

Rockefeller Plane In Trouble

New York, Aug. 19.

An airliner carrying two millionaires Rockefeller to the Norwegian wedding of their brother, Steven, was forced to return to Idlewild Airport tonight because of engine trouble which developed over the Atlantic.

Mr. Rodman Rockefeller, 27-year-old credit analyst, and his wife, and his brother, Michael, 21, a Harvard University student, boarded the KLM Royal Dutch Airliner DC 7C at 5:26 p.m. for Amsterdam. The plane was about 185 miles out of New York when trouble developed in one of its engines. The pilot dumped about 3,000 gallons of fuel and landed at Idlewild at 8:12 p.m. (0012 GMT).

The Rockefellers and the 30 other passengers later left on another plane.

The Rockefeller brothers said they were taking no risks because they wanted to find out what the new jets were capable of.

Asked what gifts they were taking, Rodman, eldest son of Nelson A. Rockefeller replied: "In our family, we always find out what they need and then we get accordingly. You know what happens if you don't do that. They get 27 ashtrays."—UPL.

She died on the way to hospital.

The Englishman's Right To Stand On The Street The Battle Begins

London, Aug. 19.

Louis Goldberg, a boiler maintenance man who lives in the tough East End borough of Stepney, was told by a magistrate yesterday that, contrary to popular belief, there's nothing in British law that says you have a right to stand on the sidewalk and take the air of an evening.

Goldberg, a stubborn man, said he'd rather go to jail than pay a fine of £2 for it, but he may not have to do either just yet.

The National Council of Civil Liberties announced today that it would "look into" the case and Council Chairman Malcolm Purdie added "the matter will have to be decided in a higher court, or the Home Secretary will have to make some sort of a statement."

'I Will Not'

Goldberg's case began the night before when he stood peacefully taking in whatever fresh air Stepney affords from a vantage point outside a pub called the "Admiral Blakeney's Head."

Along came Police Constable Anthony Bell with the request: "Citizen are you prone to make the one about moving along."

"I will not," said Goldberg, who was born in Poland 53 years ago but became a naturalized British subject after he came to England in 1919.

So the policeman took him along to the station where he was officially charged with obstructing a policeman in his duties.

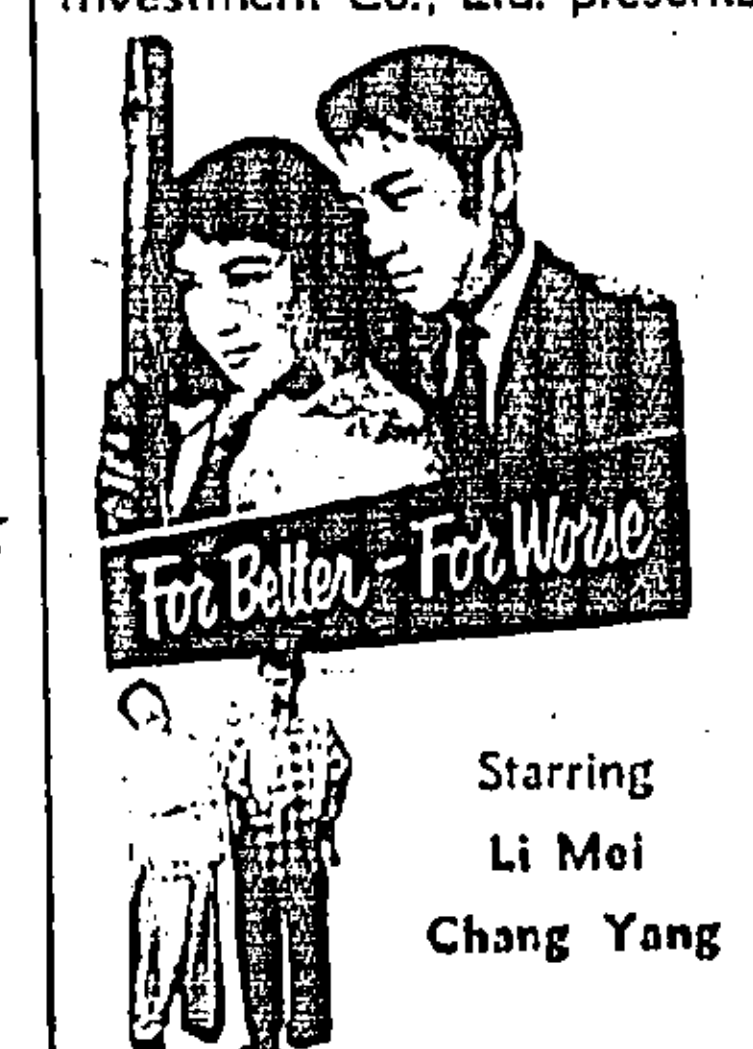

Yesterday, when he appeared in court, Goldberg told the magistrate, "I have a right to stand near my home and get fresh air."

'You Have Not'

Back came Magistrate Leo Gradwell with: "Curiously enough, you haven't. People always think that, but the law states you have only the right to stand near your home."

18 Months' Gaol For Stabbing 3 People

A 57-year-old hawk who admitted stabbing a family of three in Aberdeen on July 7 was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment by Mr I. T. Morris at Central Magistrate's Court this morning.

Choy Luk, living in hut 427 opposite the Chinese Permanent Cemetery, pleaded guilty to three counts of wounding. Detective Inspector W. R. J. Doherty said defendant went into the cubicle of a fisherman Lee Tin at 3 p.m. on July 7 and stabbed him and his wife, Hung Sheung seven times in the body and arms.

He ran out and stabbed Lee Tin's son on the right arm with a pair of scissors.

Defendant threw away the scissors when he reached the main road but was seen by a policeman who noticed his bloodstained clothes and arrested him.

ANOTHER YEAR'S GAOL

Cheung Shu-leung, alias Ching Wai-hung, who had been sentenced to three and a half years' imprisonment by Judge T. Greaves at the Victoria District Court on August 6 for possession of arms and ammunition was this morning further sentenced to 12 months for breach of a deportation order.

Detective Inspector Charles Lee said defendant was deported for life on June 1953 for political activities and that he had returned to the Colony three times and had been three times punished for the offences.

The first time was in 1957. Sentence was imposed by Mr I. T. Morris, Central Magistrate.

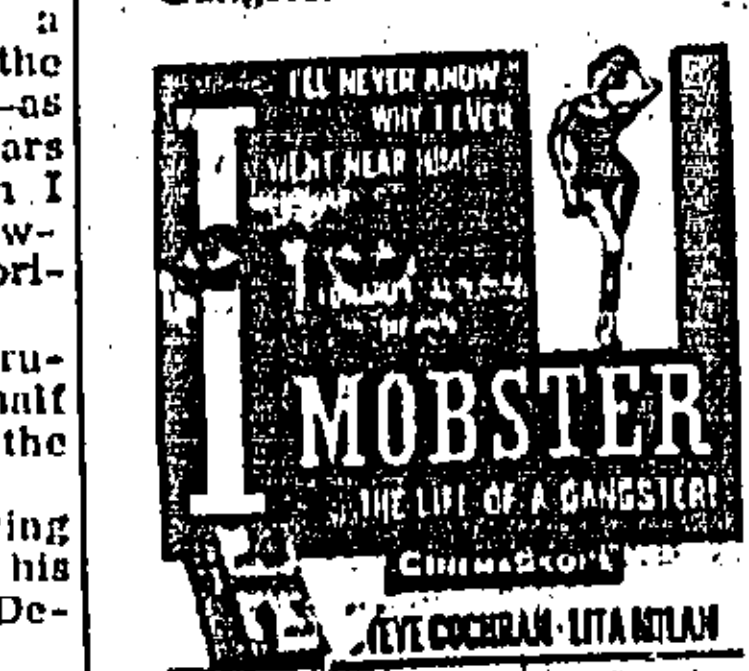

Modern 'Raffles' To Be Tried

Santa Monica, Cal., Aug. 19. Ian Anthony Hemmings, 36, who said he played the role of the fictional criminal-hero Raffles for "adventure" today was ordered to stand trial on four counts of burglary. The handsome suspect pleaded innocence to charges of stealing up to $100,000 in six months.

Hemmings, a native of Holland, came to California from Southern Rhodesia early this year. He admitted when arrested on July 12 that he had burgled about 50 homes, including that of actress Zsa Zsa Gabor, police said.—UPI.

Plan To Replace Hollywood Rd Houses

The application to replace two houses in Hollywood Road by a modern eight-story structure costing $200,000 was placed before Tenancy Tribunal by the Lap Shing Land Investment Company this morning.

Mr J. R. Oliver, President of Tenancy Tribunal with Mr Yeung Wing-hong and Mr Ipokjlan, heard plans detailed by Mr S. C. Poon, architect, by which the 40-year-old, four-story houses (Nos. 42 and 42A) will be demolished and rebuilt within ten months if the premises are exempted from Ordinance control.

Mr Y. H. Chan of Lau, Chan and Co., appearing for the applicant company, described the present buildings as being mostly of wooden construction and "an extremely great fire hazard."

He said that the ground floor premises were used for a noodle-making firm and as a Chinese tea-house, with three floors above as domestic premises, unsightly and with no modern conveniences.

Mr W. I. Cheung of P. H. Sin, appearing for tenants opposing the case asked if the majority of the premises in that area of Hollywood Road were not in the same condition and of similar age.

Mr D. L. Holland-Roberts of Hastings and Co. claimed the exclusive use of a verandah on the second floor for his client, a tenant of No. 42. Other counsel appearing for opposing tenants were Mr R. K. H. Siu of Deacons and Mr H. C. Ho of Peter Mo and Company. The case continues.

CARRIER RETURNS AFTER BLAZE

4 KILLED IN CRASH

Verecix, Berne, Aug. 19.—There were four members of a British family resident in Switzerland and a Swiss woman were killed and four other people seriously injured in a car accident at Verecix yesterday.

Mr. George Bein, 60, was driving from Geneva in the direction of Lausanne with his family of four and three other people when he was in collision with a lorry.

The French-born wife, Suzanne, 40, their son Charles, four, and an unidentified young Swiss woman were killed instantly.

Another son, Peter, 15, died on the way to hospital.

The Wasp, flagship of Task Force Bravo which is developing new ways to hunt and destroy enemy submarines, was torn by a below-deck hangar blaze yesterday when a helicopter engine "ran away" and exploded as the ship steamed 250 miles off the coast.

SCRAMBLE TO SEE PRINCESS

Brisbane, Aug. 19.—Women and children were knocked down at Brisbane's hot and dusty showground today as an unruly crowd scrambling to see Princess Alexandra threatened to get out of hand.

Clouds of dust swirled up, blotting out the Princess from the sight of people only 20 feet away.

The Princess showed signs of feeling the sub-tropical heat as she walked round after opening the Brisbane Royal National Show—one of the main official events of her visit.

Once her hat went askew and strands of hair began playing over her face. Several times she became separated from her lady-in-waiting, Lady Maira Hamilton.

The pace of her movements left nearly all the Royal party standing. Some times small children rushed up and clutched her hand.

OPENED SHOW

When she opened the show, Princess Alexandra was in plain view of a crowd estimated at 40,000 as she stood on a central dais.

The Princess is to be given a toy koala bear. She asked for it after cuddling and admiring some live ones at a reception last night.

Two-Year Sentence Demanded For Nazi General

Dusseldorf, Aug. 19.—THE State today demanded a two-year sentence for former Nazi Gen. Hasso von Manteuffel, accused of manslaughter in the death of a subordinate 15 years ago.

Von Manteuffel, a former member of the lower house of the West German Parliament, was accused of having changed a court martial sentence from two years in gaol to death for a 22-year-old German soldier in 1944. The soldier was convicted of leaving his guard post on the Russian front.

Prosecutor Hans Luenen said in court today that Von Manteuffel, commander of a tank division, changed the sentence passed by the division court martial to death to "frighten the soldiers of the division."

Crucial Point

Von Manteuffel claimed on Monday that at the time of the court martial his division held a crucial point on the Russian front and he needed a death sentence to keep other soldiers from leaving their posts.

Earlier, former Gen. Hermann Balk, who in 1944 was commander of the tank corps to which Von Manteuffel's division belonged, told the court: "I never had a division commander who led his unit as ingeniously as Von Manteuffel."

Former Field Marshal Erich von Manstein, commander of Nazi Army Group South in 1944, told the court he could not remember the circumstances of the court martial, but testified that Von Manteuffel held one of the most crucial points of the Russian front and that he had to do everything possible to maintain discipline.

Von Manteuffel's lawyer Ernst Laternser, asked for acquittal. He said Von Manteuffel did not know the so-called "Fuhrer" order from Adolf Hitler—delegating extra power to unit commanders in rare cases—was illegal. —UPI.

Iraqi Army Officers To Die

Bagdad, Aug. 19.—The Baghdad Peoples Court tonight sentenced five Iraqi army officers to die in front of a firing squad for taking part in the abortive Mosul revolt against the Government last March.

Three other officers were jailed for life, and 11 officers and a civilian acquitted. The Prime Minister, General Abdel Karim Kassam, must approve the sentences, handed down by the court President, Colonel Fadhil Abbas Makhul.

One civilian was sentenced to death by hanging. According to the court's indictment, the condemned were found guilty of taking part in the mutiny, led by Colonel Abdul Wahab Shawwat which aimed at changing the legal regime in Iraq and annexing Iraq to the United Arab Republic.

The indictment described the UAR as "a foreign state." —Reuters.

Tablets Found

Birmingham, Aug. 19.—Police here today announced they had accounted for 950 dangerous missing tablets for which a search began last Wednesday when a 40-year-old man was seen distributing them to children as "tweddles."

The search ended today when about 300 tablets were recovered from a drain by Salvage Department workers.

A woman told police she had thrown them there. —China Mail Special.

Fountain Coins Go To Cleaners

London, Aug. 19.—Silver and copper coins thrown by tourists glinted in the basin of a fountain outside Buckingham Palace today—and police kept a lookout for small boys who won't mind getting wet in the search for treasure trove.

Two boys in swimsuits, aged about 11, took the plunge into the two-foot deep water of the Queen Victoria memorial fountain over the weekend.

A policeman surprised them clutching handfuls of coins. He made them put the loot back, took their names and sent them home with a lecture.

TRESPASSING

Today, lawyers agreed that the coins had been abandoned and belonged to no one.

"But the boys were trespassing," a Ministry of Works official pointed out. "Naturally, we don't intend to prosecute. We are treating the whole thing as a school-boy prank."

"The basin is cleaned once a fortnight and the eight cleaners divide the money between them. I don't suppose they get more than a shilling or two each."

"Tourists have been throwing coins in this particular fountain for several years. We think people got the idea from the American film, 'Three Coins in the Fountain'."

The film, set in Rome, featured the legend that those who throw coins into the Fontana di Trevi will return to the Italian capital. —China Mail Special.

Monty Won't Meet Ike

London, Aug. 19.—When President Eisenhower, wartime Commander-in-Chief of the Allied armies in Europe, meets with a number of his former comrades-in-arms here at the end of this month, Field Marshal Lord Montgomery of Alamein is not likely to be among them, informed sources said here today.

Asked if he thought a meeting possible, Field Marshal Montgomery said laconically: "But answer comes there none."

It is believed that he was referring to last January when Eisenhower did not reply to the traditional card of good wishes which Montgomery sent him.

The wartime animosity of the two soldiers received a blasting when Montgomery published his memoirs last year. Former chief of the British forces in Europe, he did not hesitate to criticize Eisenhower's conduct of operations during the war.

President Eisenhower will be met by the Duke of Edinburgh on his arrival at Dyce Airport, Aberdeenshire, on August 28 for his visit to the Queen at Balmoral.

The President and the Duke will together motor to Balmoral, arriving in time for luncheon. —AFP & Reuters.

FOOTER WAS ON GUARD

London, Aug. 19.—Victor Footer, a six-foot guard who stands like a ramrod outside Buckingham Palace, had good reason to set himself on the back today.

Footer, who just served 10 days' confinement for "kicking" an American tourist, took a new incident at the Palace gate without batting an eyelid.

Last night a British woman in a green dress and carrying a shopping bag tried to dash through the gates shouting, "I want to see the Queen."

Belafonte Smashes Camera In Backstage Scene

Washington, Aug. 19.—A freelance photographer said today he was "man-handled and bruised" in a backstage altercation over a camera with Negro performer Harry Belafonte. Belafonte's manager acknowledged the altercation but denied there was any physical violence.

The photographer, Al Muto, said the incident occurred last night at Carter Barron Amphitheatre where Belafonte is appearing.

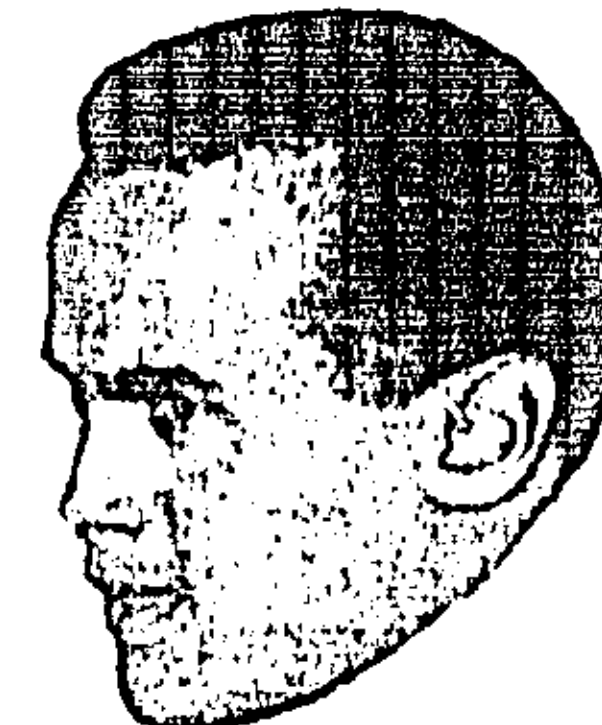

Muto said the singer "new into a rage" because he had taken pictures while Belafonte was performing. The photographer said Belafonte had him brought to his dressing room at intermission and there grabbed his camera, ripped it open and exposed the roll of film in it.

Beyond Repair According to Muto, the camera was damaged beyond repair. He said the singer had kicked it. When he pointed out the camera was valued at $250, Muto said, Belafonte ordered him paid that amount in cash.

Muto accepted and signed a receipt. The photographer said that he himself was "man-handled and bruised."

Belafonte's manager, Carson Harris, said the episode was being "much over-inflated." He said there were witnesses present and Muto wasn't even touched.

According to Harris, Muto apologized for his conduct and the singer did likewise. "Both agreed it was a misunderstanding," the manager said. —UPI.

AVIATION PIONEER DIES

London, Aug. 19.—Mr. Claude Grahame-White, one of the world's heroes of aviation and motoring, was reported here today to have died in hospital at Nice two days before his 80th birthday.

He and his second wife, Ethel Levey, the American actress, who died in New York in 1955, were two of the outstanding figures of social London in the first quarter of the century.

Mr. Grahame-White was the first Englishman to be granted a certificate of proficiency as an aviator. He started the first British flying school and was the first English pilot to carry mails by air here.

In 1910 he took his Blériot monoplane to the United States to compete in the Gordon-Bennett race and won the trophy at a speed of more than 60 miles an hour—which was hailed in those early flying days as a remarkable performance.

MOTORIST Mr. Grahame-White was also a motoring pioneer. He owned one of the first petrol-driven motor cars in England in 1906, when the speed limit was 12 miles an hour. He began his working career as an automobile engineer, and in 1909 turned his attention to aeronautics.

He won the Englishman to obtain the French Aero Club pilot's certificate and held the sixth pilot's licence granted by the British Royal Aero Club.

In 1910 London-Manchester Air Race—White first won a £10,000 prize. Mr. Grahame-White had a spectacular race with M. Louis Paulhan, the French aeronautical pioneer, but was dogged by bad luck and eventually defeated by the Frenchman, who won the prize. —China Mail Special.

Notting Hill Shooting

London, Aug. 19.—Police detained two men for questioning today following the shooting last night of Kenneth Ivan, 23-year-old Jewellery, at the Blues Club in Notting Hill, West London, scene of last year's race disturbances.

Ivan, barman at the club, was understood to have been shot in the right thigh and left leg when a small calibre revolver was fired during a struggle.

He was taken to hospital and detained but his injuries were not thought to be serious. —China Mail Special.

Concrete Case

Muskogee, Mich., Aug. 19.—Fruitport township policeman William Galt says somebody must be trying to get even for a traffic ticket.

Silbirt recently got phone calls to: "Verify that he had ordered five yards of concrete; find out where to deliver a load of cement blocks; make arrangements for moving his house; bring over five yards of cement; have his car picked up for repairs; and pick up a passenger for transportation to an airline terminal. He had ordered none of the services." —UPI.

RENE MacCOLL sees the disputed diaries and declares: They are genuine . . . an appalling self-indictment

MY CASEMENT VERDICT

SO there they were at long last, Casement's Black Diaries, lying in a green-painted strongbox, just unlocked—and open finally for my inspection. Genuine? As far as my personal opinion is concerned they are genuine beyond the slightest shadow of a doubt.

RENE MacCOLL

Our Chief Roving Reporter and author of a controversial book on Sir Roger Casement, now becomes the first man apart from a few Government officials to see the five "Black Diaries" that helped to send Casement to the gallows in 1916 for treason. At the Public Record Office, after the diaries had been transferred from the secrecy of the Home Office, MacColl reached his verdict on a case that has smouldered in England and flared in Ireland for 43 years.

These are indeed the writings of the late Roger Casement, sometime Knight, revered Foreign Office official, and convicted felon, hanged for treason in August 1916.

Mr Noel Blakiston, head of the research department at the Public Record Office, carried the metal box up from the strong room, in which it is now kept, and opened it before me.

And there they huddled, the five books—an old-fashioned Army-type field-service book secured with a strap (Casement used it for his jottings during his early days in Africa); a Letts pocket diary; a Letts desk diary; a Dollards office diary; and a ledger—the books which were seized by Scotland Yard in Casement's Ebury Street lodgings 43 years ago.

THE RECORD

The books whose very existence has been so often questioned, so often scornfully denied.

The books about which controversy has raged so furiously for nearly half a century.

The books which—as I found conclusively on reading them the other night—contain an appalling self-indictment of perversion.

Any suggestion that these five detailed documents—extending from 1901 to 1911—are forgeries, as has been repeatedly alleged by the more fervent of Casement's supporters, vanishes.

No man who was not willfully blind to the evidence of his own eyes could now deny—with whatever sorrow or regret—two things: (1) That these are the work of Casement; (2) That they constitute a staggering record of vice.

As a student for some years past of Casement's conventional writings (of which a huge collection exists) I could quickly identify his highly characteristic hand.

THE WRITING

But for those who may go to the Public Record Office without prior knowledge of this now-solved mystery, the authorities have provided a generous selection of Casement's official long-hand writings to compare against.

The Foreign Office archives section has lent to the Public Record Office two volumes of its Political Records on Latin America for 1910 and 1911. Normally these would not be on view until next year and 1961 respectively, for there is a 50-year embargo on the release of official documents to the public.

In addition there is a third volume of Foreign Office documents for 1903.

Thus the researcher can not only compare the writings of Roger Casement with the respectable Foreign Office man sending in official reports to his Whitehall superiors with Roger Casement's furtive and compulsive homosexual; but can also cross-check on dates as shown in the official records and the Black Diaries.

It is these same three Foreign Office volumes of records which were used by Dr Wilson Harrison, Director of the South Wales and Monmouthshire Forensic Science Laboratory, in conducting his study of the handwriting in the diaries which resulted in his declaring them genuine.

Several of the Black Diaries now on view are quoted verbatim in "The Black Diaries," the book by former Fleet Street man Peter Singleton-Gates which was published last spring in Paris and which finally forced the hand of the Home Office.

A check with the original diaries shows that the typescript copies secured by Singleton-Gates 37 years ago and used by him as the basis for his book were correct and accurate copies of the originals.

But there is one diary now revealed at the Public Record Office—it is the Letts diary for 1911, covering Casement's journeys in South America in connection with his famous report on the slave-labour rubber trade in the Putumayo jungles—which has not been seen before even as a copy except by a tiny handful of high officials.

It is a horrible document—horrible and yet pitiful. A dreary, repetitive record of compulsive, obsessive homosexuality.

In Paris, in Iquitos, in town after town of Latin America, Casement sought out complaisant male companions. His clandestine activities are explicitly described. The amounts he paid for these dubious favours are laboriously itemised.

It would be quite impossible to try to present bowdlerised versions of these writings; impossible to convey the brutality and bluntness with which he set down the record.

And nowhere is there the slightest sign that this frightful collection is other than absolutely genuine.

INCONGRUOUS

No evidence of interpolation or addition. No break in the writing. It flows on and on in Casement's unmistakable hand, tightly spaced in ink and pencil.

A record of unnatural vice perhaps unparalleled in the English language.

And yet even in this 1911 diary there is to be found the weirdly incongruous counterpoint of official business—cipher cables, reports to Whitehall and so forth—and Casement's sinister personal activities.

SIR ROGER CASEMENT

CASEMENT was a handsome, bearded Irishman of tremendous personality and energy. In the decade before the 1914 war he swept into world-wide celebrity as a Foreign Office man by exposing the slave-labour conditions in the rubber-growing areas of the Congo and Peru. King George V knighted him.

But Casement was a tortured Irish nationalist. When the 1914 war broke out he at once went to Germany and tried to persuade Irishmen among the British P.O.W.s in German camps to fight against England. This was clearly treasonable and when Casement came ashore from a German U-boat on a lonely Irish coast in 1916, and was promptly captured, his execution was a foregone conclusion.

But now here began the mystery which created the brouhaha lasting nearly half a century. In the period between Casement's being found guilty and sentenced to hang, and his actual execution in Pentonville 43 years ago this month, copies of his "Black Diaries" were circulated on both sides of the Atlantic.

The object? To choke off attempts to have him reprieved. In 1916 the U.S. was still neutral, Irish-American opinion was being carefully watched by Britain. The situation was tricky. So the decision was taken to show the diaries—containing copious notes and references to homosexual activity—to those people who were most active in urging clemency.

It worked, of course. The reaction to the glimpsed diaries was sheer horror. Honourable men dropped their respective plans immediately. And Casement was duly hanged, his name twice blackened, once as a traitor, again as a homosexual.

But, having connived at this business, the British Government decided to play ostrich about the whole thing. And ever since then, believe it or not, successive British Home Secretaries have solemnly assured those seeking the truth that they were unable to confirm or deny the existence of the "Black Diaries."

What thousands of words have been poured out in the great debate over this books, articles, letters to the editors of newspapers all over the world, memoirs, speeches.

At last a Home Secretary—in the person of Mr R. A. Butler—has seen that it is better to tell the truth rather than try to hush things up, whatever the motives may be.

And after all these years I was present recently at the Public Record Office in London to examine the "Black Diaries," to read them and to tell the truth—on YOUR behalf. . . .

On the same date you in terrible jeopardy, the moment are apt to find Casement fled to Germany at the outbreak of the 1914 war, have been found guilty and sentenced to hang, and his actual execution in Pentonville 43 years ago this month, copies of his "Black Diaries" were circulated on both sides of the Atlantic.

You ask: How could Casement, who knew himself to be a chronic bungler, have been so successful in his mission?

When he landed in Ireland from a German U-boat just before the Dublin Easter Rising of 1916, what was the first thing the police found in his pocket when they caught him? Why, the stub of a railway sleeper ticket from Berlin to Wismarsleben, where he had embarked in the U-boat.

The "Black Diaries," which the British Home Office has now made available at the Public Record Office in London for inspection by persons with special authorisation. The documents consist of two desk diaries, another of octavo size, a black ledger and a notebook.

And will the exhibits at the Public Record Office at last still this unique controversy?

I fear not. Because Mr Butler, the Home Secretary, has laid it down that no photographs may be taken of the diaries.

Until they can be carefully photographed by experts and subjected to conclusive X-ray and infra-red treatment, the voices of the extremists will never be finally still, and those who have cried "For-giveness!" will no doubt continue to do so.

Nor would it hurt to have another couple of handwriting experts called in to corroborate the findings of Dr Harrison.

Dr Harrison is a distinguished man, but as has already been pointed out by Mr Emrys Hughes (Lab., South Ayrshire) in parliamentary debate: "We cannot expect the Irish people to accept as the final verdict the opinion of a special witness employed by the Home Office." But for me the matter is settled.

These are Roger Casement's Black Diaries. (London Express Service).

WHEN I HEARD THE GREAT NEWS...

ALL tribute to a gallant woman and a great queen. Quite frankly, the news the other day from Buckingham Palace came to me as a surprise although I was on the royal tour for five weeks and saw the Queen every day.

New York.

There were, of course, rumours, but the women correspondents inclined to know about these matters assumed me positively that it just could not be that the Queen was expecting a baby.

Then came that first day in White Horse, Yukon Territory, when the Queen looked as if she were going to faint.

She went through the long and arduous programme in the dusty streets of the capital of the remote North, her hands clenching and unclenching, her face taut and haggard, and her eyes usually sparkling, dim and lacking lustre.

I saw Prince Philip look anxiously at his wife several times during the day under the hot sun. We thought then that the Queen was suffering from extreme nervous exhaustion after one of the most punishing and exacting journeys she has undertaken.

Tense atmosphere

Prince Philip, of course, knew the Queen was expecting a baby. So did Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, and, naturally, the Queen's doctor on the tour, Surgeon Captain Steele-Perkins.

The next day in the Press room of the Royal Canadian Air Force barracks at White Horse there was the briefing given by the Canadian Press secretary, the young and handsome Mr Esmond Butler. He walked into the big room smiling, pipe in hand, as a hundred newspapermen and women waited. The atmosphere was tense. Mr Butler (and now I realise it was with all the good will in the world) said: "The Queen is suffering from a stomach upset and from fatigue. She will not be going to Dawson City and will stay indoors today."

Looked annoyed

There was a babble of voices and a young Canadian correspondent shouted: "Is the Queen pregnant?"

Butler looked annoyed, then smiled and shook his head. The Canadian correspondent turned to me and said: "It was a fair question, wasn't it?" And I said: "Yes, but it might have been expressed more delicately."

And so for the next two days the Queen was indisposed and the explanation to the world was "Stomach upset and fatigue."

Those in the know kept their lips sealed. Mr Diefenbaker was so indignant, however, at reports that the Queen was not merely suffering from a minor stomach trouble that he called in the Canadian Press and two British correspondents, one of whom was myself, and denied it.

Then a number of French newspapers, guessing wildly but, as it turned out, accurately, came out and said the Queen was in "an interesting condition," as the Court phraseology goes. We again asked Mr Esmond Butler the important question and again, in good faith, he denied that the Queen was expecting a baby.

The Queen resumed the schedule in Edmonton, the oil capital, looking rather pale and tired in the morning but sparkling and vivacious in the evening after all the handshakes, the parades, the drives, the luncheons, the banquets, and the ever-present Brownies.

Surgeon Captain Steele-Perkins, whom we saw quite a bit, never dropped a hint, nor did anyone else in the know. However, Steele-Perkins was seeing the Queen every day and sometimes twice a day, and Prince Philip, it seemed to me in the last stages of the tour, was playing a bigger part in the long programme and trying to take some of the burden from the Queen.

The Press gave a party to the Queen and Prince Philip in our car in the royal train, and I was honoured to be chairman at this reception. The Queen did not come and now we know why.

After the party I walked alone beside the tracks to the observation car at the rear of the train. There was a figure there standing on the observation platform all bent against the night sky. It was the Queen. There was something touching, in fact infinitely moving, about this lonely figure looking out over the prairies.

Of all the many vivid scenes and incidents during this extraordinary tour, including the tumultuous reception in Chicago, this scene in the heart of Canada is etched most deeply on my mind.

Headline news

It would have been so easy for a less devoted woman to have cut short the tour or, indeed, never to have embarked upon it. But Queen Elizabeth puts the Crown and her duty above all else—above herself, her children, everything.

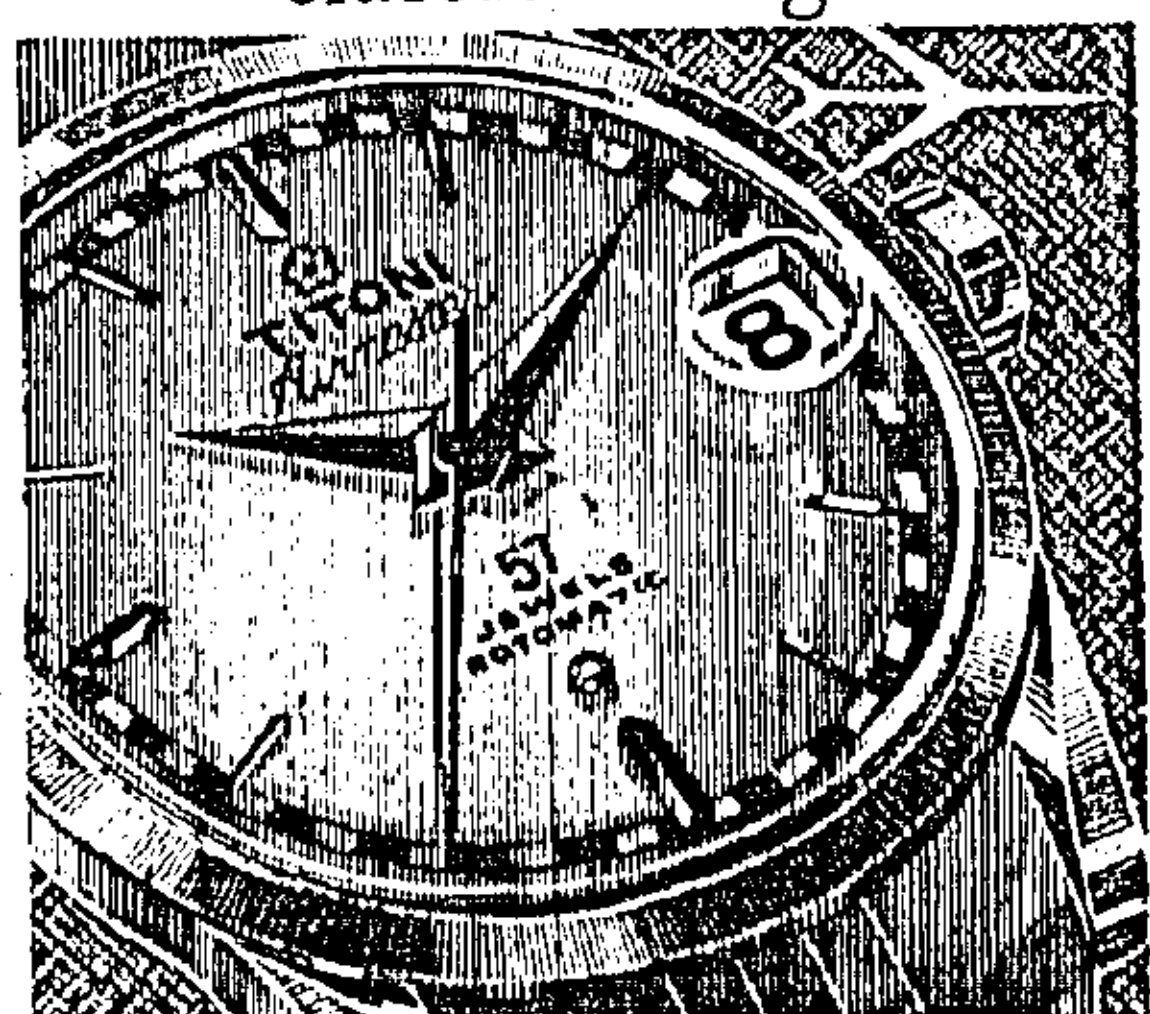

Now, in the United States and in Canada, still smarting from the allegations of indifference and hypersensitivity about criticisms of the way the tour was planned, there is a great surge of emotion and love for the Queen. The news was announced at breakfast-time in North America on the radio and television networks, and it was headline news in the evening newspapers throughout the continent on the day. It is the big talking point here today, even over-shadowing the forthcoming visit of Mr Khrushchev.

On the sidewalks of New York, on the benches of Central Park, and in Rockefeller Plaza, the people, particularly the women, are saying: "What a wonderful woman. What a great Queen." How right they are.

JACOBY on BRIDGE

SOUTH'S three no-trump bid was based on hope, a stout heart and confidence in his ability to pick up a trick or so in the play if he had to.

One look at dummy showed him that he had little or no play for his contract but his expression radiated confidence and after winning the opening heart lead with the ace he put the nine of clubs on the table quicker than you could say "Jack Robinson."

West should have been ready with the dummy but West hesitated awhile and played the ten. It just never occurred to him that South would have overcalled with two clubs and then bid three no-trump with a jack

So West played the ten and South simply played low from dummy. He was sure that East held the ace for his opening bid and it just might be a singleton.

Lo and behold, it was! East had to take his partner's ten and there was no way to keep South from making five club tricks and winding up with an overtrick at his impossible contract.

The new ducks on the water at Cowes... WOMEN!

by Jill Butterfield

THE sport that was once for the glossy set only is open to everyone now. Each season new sailing clubs are springing up, and more than four out of ten new members are women.

This week the new, gay ducks on the water at Cowes are in a thousand small boats that will converge on the harbour.

The days when we only looked pretty adorning luxury yachts are over. The days when we wore husbands' old hand-down oilskins, filthy trousers, and sweat rags tied around the neck, are equally dated.

Gone for ever are the days when we were tolerated only to clean the decks, hand out the sea-sick pills, and make outside meals from tins.

THE WINNERS

Today women are crowding the boats and giving the sport a new eye appeal.

They wear clothes just as tough and sensible as men's, but they are pretty, cheap, and comfortable. In place of the old oilskins that swamped them, they have fingertip-length jackets with wide patch pockets.

Flappy trousers have been replaced by slick, well-cut shorts for dinghy sailing and long, tight slacks for the larger boats.

Flattering woollen caps hug the head and defy the strongest breeze. They've even learned the language.

In short, as usual, they've beaten the men at their own game.

FOR LITTLE GIRLS

NEW In Britain — the look you'd expect to see only in France or Italy, where little girls are really something to thank heaven for. It's a look that's full of fashion news — a simple shape, a strong colour, its only trimming a fresh-as-a-daisy applied marguerite.

NEW on the Cote d'Azur — the brown-lipped look. This heat-wave summer has tanned skins deeper than ever, and the French girls play up a tan with brown lipsticks either a shade lighter or a shade darker than their skins. They're newer than the baby-pinks and white of the early summer, more chic than last year's oranges, and easier to make a mistake with than either.

NEW best idea I've seen for coping with sea-wet hair. Bashing caps are abandoned this year and smart girls pin-curl their sea-wet hair with ordinary hair-grips into which they've threaded tiny artificial flowers. Prettiest head drying in the sun at Portofino was this wet ginger one stuck all over with miniature blue cornflowers.

WHEN A PRIM LITTLE RICH GIRL REBELS...

ONCE UPON a time there was a good little girl. She had long golden hair and big dark eyes and a doting mummy and a very rich daddy and the best education that money could buy.

And they groomed her into the pattern of all good little rich girls and they dressed her in a sweater, a neat tweed skirt, and a nice row of nice little pearls. The world said she'd marry a prince.

But this little girl had something else.

For she came from a land where little girls are made of something more potent than sugar and spice, where tempers and passions are red-pepper hot.

She exchanged Prince Charming for another. She shed her expensive uniform for one even more exclusive—the sort of bikini that any girl can afford to buy but very few can afford to wear.

Sylvia Casablanca proved last week that we're all sisters under the skin and it only needs the sun to make a sizzler from a cygnet.

What Shall I Do? QUESTION

Mrs. Rason's son has been brought up by a foster-mother. Now that she has remarried, she would like her son — now grown up — to share her new home.

When the boy was young she did not visit him regularly, but she paid for his keep and wrote to him. The boy's foster-mother is now dead and she has met him to try to make a closer contact with him.

Her son, however, is very aloof, shows no affection and has no wish to move into her house.

Should she—
A—Realise that his reaction is natural and leave him to his own plans, understanding that she is really only a mother in name and can never be anything more?

B—Continue to write and ask to see him in the hope that she will gradually bring him round to a more affectionate frame of mind?

C—Stake everything on one meeting in which she explains why she had to let him be fostered and could not offer him a home before, and hope that this explanation will change his attitude?

ANSWER

Mrs. Rason has no alternative but to choose A. Even if she chose C and he fully understood why he had seen so little of her as a child, this would not be sufficient to make him regard her as his mother and share her home.

For the same reason, B is not likely to succeed—in fact, he is more likely to be irritated by her requests to see him.

She must be brave and recognise that the real mother to this boy was the foster-mother and that he cannot ever regard anyone else in this light.

MAKE IT A COOL SUNDAY

By HELEN BURKE

WHY should Sunday's dinner always be hot in summer when an all-cold meal can be so much more enjoyable?

People who have visited Italy must have tasted Vitello Tonnato (benedict veal with tuna fish and anchovies). It is served cold. There is no fishy taste about it—just a delicious, unforgettable flavour.

Here is a summer menu for four to five people:

Veal with tuna fish and anchovies; Tomato, cucumber and green pepper salad; Summer pudding.

Main dish

AFTER removing the fat and gristle, "lard" a 2lb boned fillet of veal with 2 boned brined anchovies, cut into 8 thin strips. Tie the fillet into a neat shape with string.

Put into a saucepan an onion stick with 2 cloves, 2 sliced carrots, a sliced stick of celery, a bay leaf, a small handful of coarse salt and enough water to cover the veal. Bring to the boil, add the veal.

Chop two more boned anchovies. Place them in a basin with 4oz canned tuna fish and 2 anchovies. Add a little mayonnaise and just under a cup of olive oil and the juice of a lemon and finally, a dessert-spoon of capers.

Cut the cold veal into thin slices and place them in a dish just large enough to hold them. Pour the somewhat liquid tuna sauce on to and leave overnight. Arrange the veal slices on a serving dish, pour the sauce over them and garnish with slices of lemon.

The salad

SKIN and slice 1lb tomatoes. Thinly slice ½ large cucumber and cut a cord and deseeded good-sized green sweet pepper into very thin strips. Place these in layers in a salad bowl, seasoning them as you go.

The sweet

STEW 1 to 1½lb mixed soft fruit (red currants and raspberries or loganberries) in very little water and sugar to taste. Closely line a basin or soufflé dish with ¼-inch slices of crustless bread.

Strain off some of the juice from the fruit and turn the remaining fruit and juice into the lined dish. Cover completely with more bread. Stand the dish on a soup plate, to catch any overflow, and place a weighted plate on top and leave overnight.

Next day turn out the pudding on to a deep serving dish, pour the juice over it and serve with thin custard or single or top milk cream—or nothing.

KNARF and Hanid, the Shadow Children with the turned About Names, saw it all happen!

They were both sitting in the far corner of the room. On the other side of the room, sitting under a lamp in a deep chair reading a book and smoking his pipe, was Father.

It was out of the bowl of Father's pipe that all the strange things came!

At first there was just a thin curl of smoke. But as it floated up toward the ceiling, it took on another shape.

Knarf and Hanid watched it. "Look!" Hanid said to Knarf. "It's turning into a house!"

A Whole Village

More and more wisps of smoke rose out of the bowl of Father's pipe. And as they floated toward the ceiling, they, too, turned into houses. Soon, in the corner of the ceiling, there seemed to be a whole village of pretty houses, some large, some small. A street ran between them. Along the street were trees.

In the distance, Knarf and Hanid could make out a mountain covered with grass.

Then came more wisps of smoke and Knarf and Hanid saw children playing. They saw women hanging out their clothes to dry. They saw men mowing the lawns.

Down The Street

Then all at once from all the houses came men and women and children. They walked together down the street.

"I wonder where they're going!" Knarf said to Hanid. "The whole village is made of smoke, but everybody seems to be alive!"

"Something is happening to the houses," Hanid said. "Just look!"

Right before their eyes, Knarf and Hanid saw the houses—the houses made of smoke—all come together. They grew into one great house. It was a house with towers and steeples and huge windows of coloured glass.

"It's a church!" Hanid said.

Into The Church

Into the church went all the people. And then, slowly again, the smoke changed its shape and Knarf and Hanid seemed to be looking inside the church. They could see twinkling candles and from off very faintly they could hear the whisper of music. The church was crowded with people.

Then down the aisle marched a girl dressed all in white and a young man dressed in his finest clothes.

"It's a wedding!" said Hanid. "It's a wedding all in smoke!"

Knarf was sure he heard the voices of people. The music sounded louder than before. And he could plainly hear the ringing of bells.

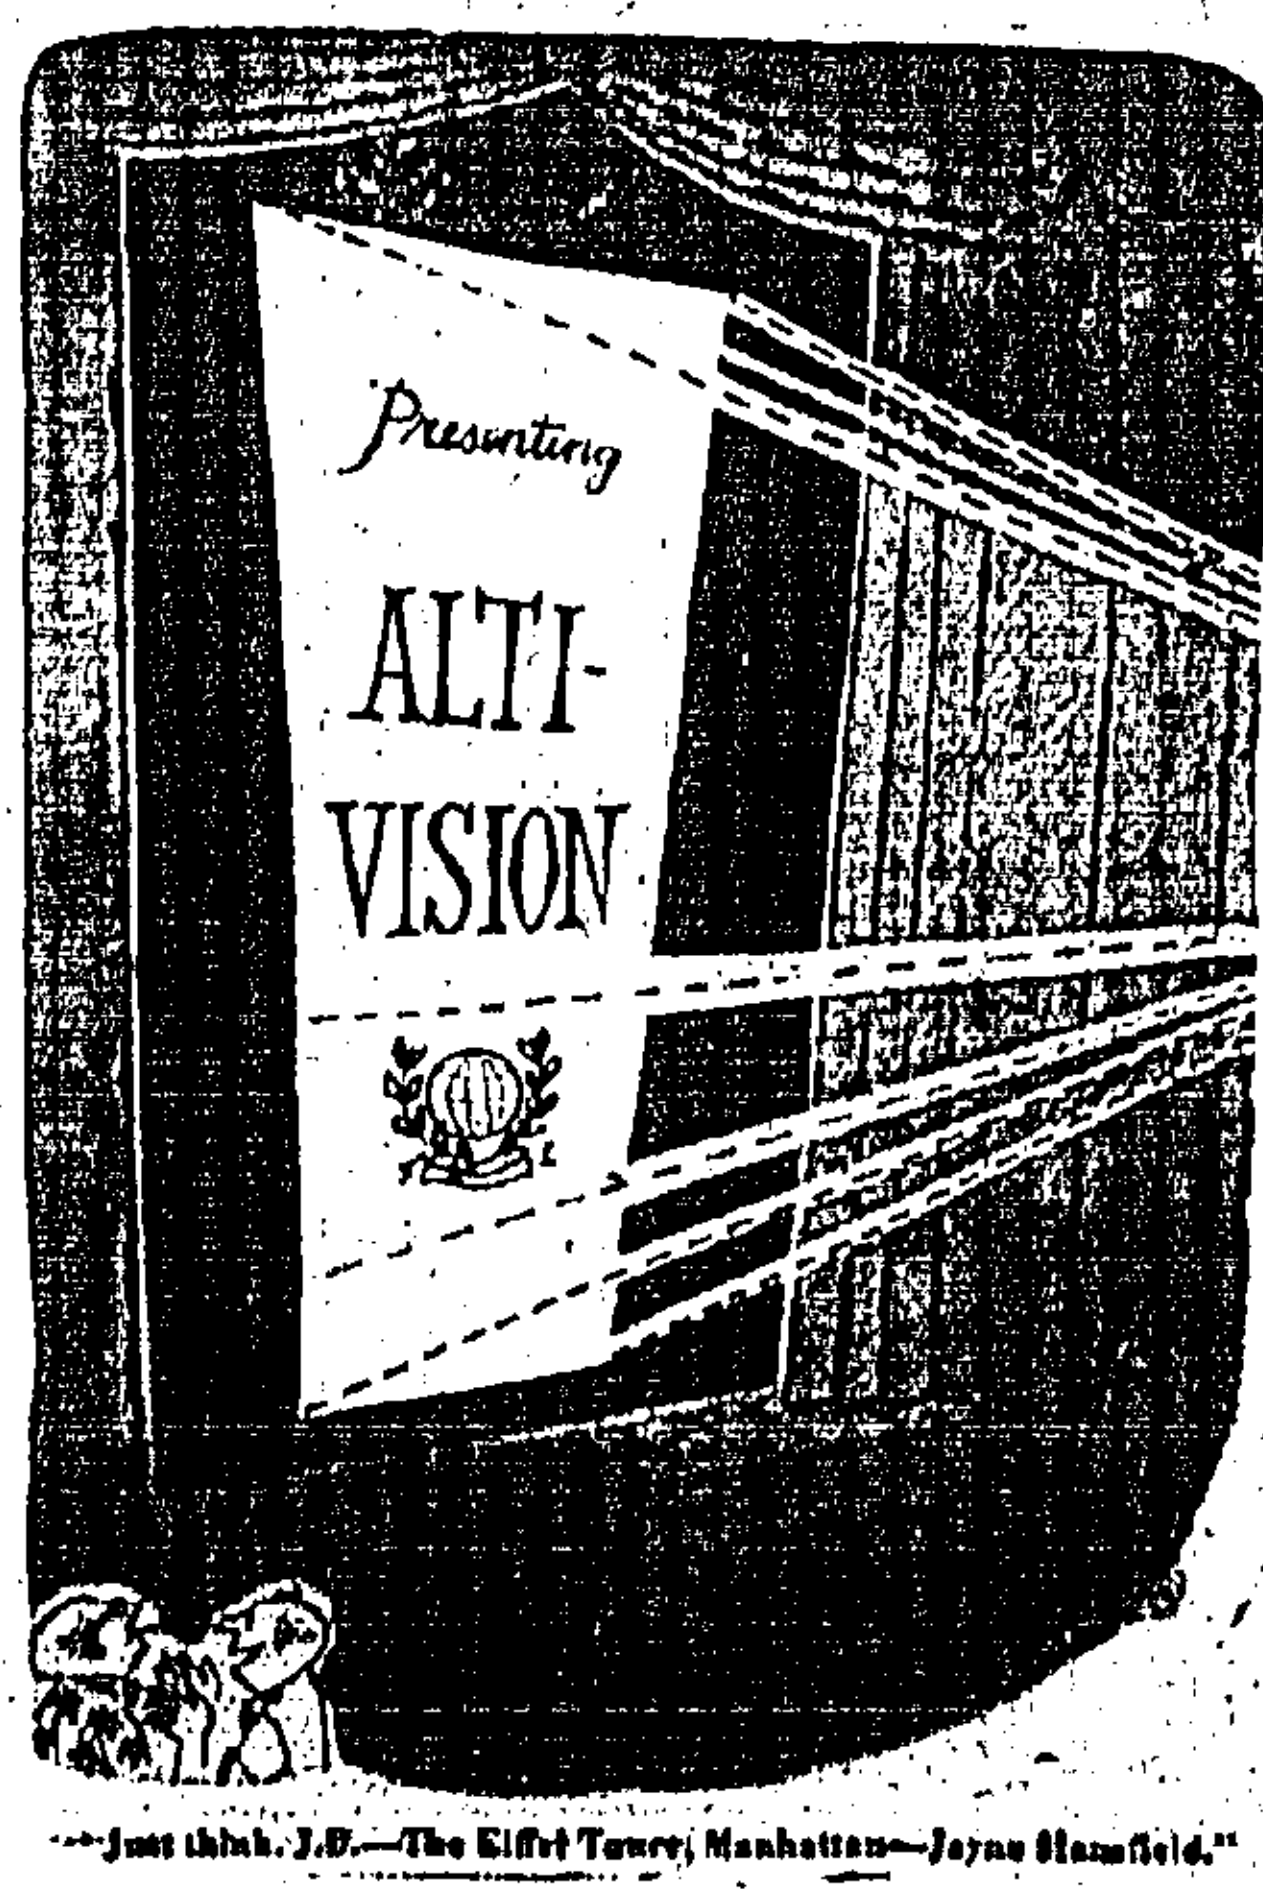

The wisps of smoke turned into a house.

Then slowly again, and for the last time, the smoke changed its shape and became a single big ringing bell.

Then Father tapped out his pipe and closed his book, put out the lamp light and went to bed.

The last thing that Knarf and Hanid saw was the big bell of smoke, floating out through the open window.

Warwickshire Well Up In County Cricket Race

SURE OF BONUS POINTS IN GAME WITH NOTTS

London, Aug. 19.

Warwickshire, only eight points behind leaders Yorkshire in the English county cricket championship struggle, kept well in the hunt for the title today as both Yorkshire and Surrey struggled in the field all day against Somerset and Leicestershire respectively.

It was ironic that Warwickshire's hero against Nottinghamshire in Birmingham should have been Yorkshire-born 33-year-old opening batsman Norman Horner who hit a century, including 18 fours in 95 minutes to help Warwickshire make sure of bonus points.

After dismissing Nottinghamshire for 130 Warwickshire passed this total without loss and were 162 for one at the close, having taken bonus points with an incredibly fast scoring rate of 4.76 runs per over.

Meanwhile Somerset had Yorkshire very much on the receiving end in their match at Bath.

Career Best

After an opening stand of 118 by Roy Virgin whose 68 was a career best and Jim Lomas who was fifth out for 82, Somerset went on to compile 342 for five by close of play.

Willie Watson, the Leicestershire captain, seems to be doing more than any other individual player to stop Surrey retaining the title. He scored 155 against Surrey last month, and today made 173 of Leicestershire's 329 for eight.

It was Yorkshireman Watson's highest score for his adopted county. He batted five hours 40 minutes and hit 21 fours.

A total of 21 wickets fell during the day in the match at Dover between Kent and Gloucestershire.

On a pitch taking considerable spin, Gloucestershire dismissed Kent for 119 (Tony Brown five for 35) and gained a useful first innings lead of 75.

George Tribe, Northamptonshire's 38-year-old Australian all-rounder got his 100th wicket of the season in the match against Sussex at Worthing, and now needs only 111 runs from a possible eight innings to achieve the double of 100 wickets and 1,000 runs for the seventh time in eight seasons.

Sussex for whom left-hander Ken Suttle made 108 — his second century of the season — were 274 all out at close of play.

Scores

Close of play scores in today's cricket matches were:

At Worthing: Sussex 274 (K. Suttle 108, F. Tyson five for 64). Versus Northamptonshire.

At Lord's: Royal Air Force 116. The Army 191 (J. Fawkes 47). Two-day match.

At Dover: Kent 119 (A. Brown five for 35 and secondly 11 for one). Gloucestershire 191 (M. Young 58, H. Nicholls 49, C. Page seven for 62).

At Clacton: Derbyshire 313 for six declared (A. Hamer 55, 1. Hall 46, C. Lee 50, H. Johnson 74). Essex seven for two.

At Stourbridge: Hampshire 289 (R. Marshall 75, H. Horton 77). Worcestershire 10 for one.

At Leicester: Leicestershire 329 for eight (W. Watson 173, Van Goolven 61). Versus Surrey.

At Birmingham: Nottinghamshire 130. Warwickshire 162 for one (N. Horner 107, F. Gardner 44 not out).

At Bath: Somerset 342 for five (R. Virgin 68, J. Lomas 52, W. Alley 56 not out, C. Greenham 49 not out). Versus Yorkshire. — Reuters.

Durrelle Goes Down And Out

"Agilest" Archie Moore, the boxer who has little regard either for the almanac or his ring opponents, retained his world light-heavyweight title in Montreal on August 12, when he knocked out Canada's Yvon Durrelle in the third round of their return bout.

Durrelle worried Moore in their first meeting, but this time he was never in the fight. In the top photo, Durrelle is seen going down for the last time in the third round after having been floored three times in the same round. The lower photo shows where he lands — almost out of the ring.

3. Eboraceur, 4 years, 7 stone, owned by Dr. B. Palfear, ridden by B. Elliott, trained by H. Price. Three lengths behind.

There were 21 starters. Starting prices were: 6/1, 8/1, 20/1. Morecombe was favourite at 11/2.—A.P.P.

Talbert, former U.S. Davis Cup captain and nearing 41, and the 24-year-old Lesch defeated Tony Pickard and Bobby Wilson in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2, 7-5. Pickard and Wilson were the third-seeded foreign pairings.

A Marathon

Australians Bob Mark and Rod Laver, the second seeded foreign pair struggled through 62 games and two hours and 45 minutes of play at Longwood Cricket Club before bottling the surprisingly rugged combination of 45-year-old Gardner Mulloy and Jack Frost. A break of Mulloy's second service in the final set gave the Australians the opportunity to win the match, 10-12, 6-3, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4.

Both top American and foreign-seeded pairings advanced in the play which winds up on Sunday.

The number one domestic team of Alex Olmco and Earl Buchholz beat Larry Nagler and Al Fox, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4, and Neale Fraser and Itoy Emerson of Australia, the top-ranked foreign team, defeated stubborn Ed Bailey and Harry Hoffman, 6-4, 6-4, 11-9.

Champions Through

Maria Bueno, Wimbledon queen from Sao Paulo, Brazil, teamed with Sally Moore of Bakersfield, California, its out Ruth Jeffrey of Melrose and Ann Carlier of England, 6-0, 6-1, in the women's division.

Defending women's champions Darlene Hard and Jeanne Arth won their way into the quarter-finals by default.

The exciting Latin-American team of Juan Hermosilla of Guatemala and Alfonso Ochoa of Mexico gave Barry MacKay and Mike Franks a scare before the second-seeded American pairing prevailed, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.—U.P.I.

Scottish League Football

Glasgow, Aug. 19.

Dunfermline, who finished last season third from the bottom of the first division, celebrated the start of the Scottish League soccer competition tonight with a 6-0 win over Motherwell, third from the top at the end of last season.

The margin of Dunfermline's victory was due as much to goalkeeper Connachie as to the scoring ability of their attack. For the last 20 minutes of the first half Connachie kept his goal intact against a hail of shots.

Rangers, the League champions, survived a stirring Albion attacking spell which brought two goals in four minutes. They won by 2-2.

A goal two minutes from time by Job Baker gave Hibernian a 2-1 victory over Aberdeen.

In the second division, St Johnstone and Cowdenbeath thrilled the crowd with 10 goals, seven of them scored by St Johnstone.

A new six-a-side hockey knockout competition started last week after the completion of the League tournament which was won by Pay "B". BMH Hongkong were the runners-up. In the first game 1 Squadron Signal Regt beat RE "A" by four goals to two, and then met Pay "B" who beat them without very much effort to go into the first semi-final.

In another match HQLE beat Camp Staff by six goals to five in a very keenly fought out game which went into extra time. This was a very good game, with fortunes swinging back and forth, but HQLE managed to score the winning goal.

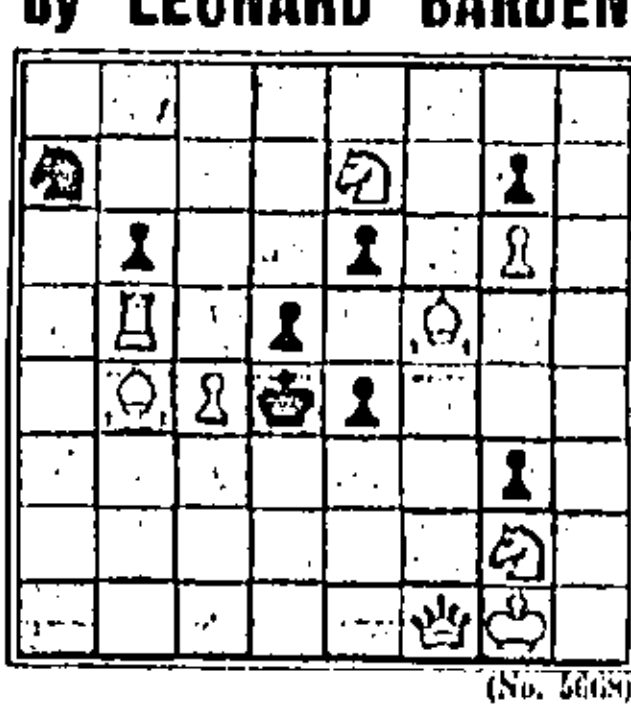

A surprise result was produced when Provost beat BMH by five goals to three to qualify for the second semi-final against Pay "A" who after a very close game beat RE "B" by the odd goal of five.

All 'Pay' Final

The first semi-final was a decisive victory for Pay "B" who beat HQLE by five goals to one and in the second semi-final Pay "A" were victorious over Provost by three goals to one. This makes it an "ALL PAY" Final, and congratulations to both teams on their very high standard of keenness and enthusiasm which with their equally good play enabled them to be finalists.

ENGLAND OUT FOR RECORD FIFTH TEST VICTORY AGAINST INDIA

David Allen A Doubtful Starter

London, Aug. 19.

David Allen, awarded his first England cap at the weekend, went to bed tonight anxiously wondering whether he will be able to wear it when the final Test against India begins at the Oval tomorrow.

Allen, dislocated the third finger of his bowling hand in a Sunday friendly, half an hour after he learned that he had been chosen for England.

Today he practised under a blazing sun at the Oval nets with the other England players—only Freddie Trueman was allowed to rest—and Colin Cowdrey, the captain said "Allen bowled quite well and was turning his off-breaks."

"Gubby" Allen, chairman of the selectors, said that a decision about Allen will not be made until the morning.

The finger may stiffen after a night's rest and that would put Allen out of the match.

Stands By

Meanwhile Tommy Greenough stands by as deputy. England have no other immediate problems. They are trying Raman Subba Row for the first time as an opening batsman, and a sound performance should assure him of a place on the West Indies tour.

India have suffered a severe blow in losing Polly Umrigar on account of a split finger. This injury causes him to break a sequence of 41 consecutive Test appearances. He hit a century in the previous Test and he will surely be missed. His place goes to Jyoti Ghosh.

pade, a keen bespectacled batsman. There is one other change. Narendra Tamhane once again being preferred as wicket-keeper to Joshi.

Happily for India, Datta Gadekar, their captain, is fit again and will lead the side. But Subhash Gupta, their talented leg-spinner, may play under a handicap as he has slightly hurt three fingers of his spinning hand. It has been decided to take the risk and include him in the team.

Victory in this match will give England a record of five wins in the series, a feat that has never been accomplished in this country.

The Teams

The teams are: England: V. G. Pillar (Lancashire), Subba Row (Northamptonshire), M. C. Cowdrey (Kent) (Captain), M. J. K. Smith (Warwickshire), K. F. Barrington (Surrey), E. R. Dexter (Sussex), R. Illingworth (Yorkshire), R. Swanton (Surrey), F. S. Trueman (Yorkshire), J. B. Statham (Lancashire), D. A. Allen (Gloucestershire) or T. Greenough (Lancashire).

India: E. Roy, N. J. Contractor, A. A. Bala, C. Q. Bori, J. M. Ghosh, R. G. Nadkarni, D. K. Gadekar (Captain), N. S. Tendulkar, R. Surendra Nath, S. P. Gupta, R. D. Deol.—A.P.P.

Meanwhile in the Plate Tournament BMH beat 1 Sq Royal Signal Regt to go into one of the semi-finals against Camp Staff.

The second semi-final had already been played off by the two Royal Engineers with victory going to RE "B" who are now one of the finalists.

Both Finals will be played off on Friday at Victoria Barracks when prizes will be presented.

Winning Teams and Runners-up for the League Championship will receive individual prizes in addition to the Winners' cup. For the Plate event prizes will be for only the winners.

Hockey Festival

Arrangements are being made for a Hockey Festival between teams of Victoria Barracks and Whitefield Barracks. There will be three teams from each side, and the series will be decided on the best of three matches. This is entirely a friendly competition to finish off the season.

At Sek-Kong, 48 Infantry Brigade are holding an 11-a-side Hockey Knock-out Tournament for the Major and Minor Units. The first round has been played off with the following results: 1st R.N.E. lost to 54 Independent Sq. 0-1; 20 Indep. Recce Ft drew with Sek-Kong Detachment 2-2; 2nd R.N.E. 0-0; 1st Royal Tank Regt drew with Camp and Signals 2-1 after replay.

The Workshop detachment decided to let 20 Independent Recce Flight AAC go forward to the next round.

In the 2nd Round the results were as follows: 1/7 Gurkha Regiment lost to 1/7 Gurkha Regiment 1-3; 5 Field Regt L.E. beat 18 Field Ambulance 0-0; 1 Royal Tank Regiment drew with 20 Indep. Recce Ft 2-2; 1st Field Regt RA lost to 54 Indep. Field Sq RE 1-2.

The semi-finals should be played off by the end of this week and the finals on the 20th of this month at Brigade HQ.

Last week presented to the winners of the League Championship by Mrs McCready wife of the Brigadier Commander Brigadier D.D.M. McCready, DSO, OBE, in a presentation arranged for the occasion the 17th Gurkha Regiment beat a selected team from the Major and Minor Units by seven goals to one.

The Brigade is arranging a six-a-side Hockey Festival on or about August 29 at Sek-Kong H.Q.

Royal Bid For Golf Title Fails

A royal bid to win the British boys' amateur golf championship failed today when Prince Alexander, 17-year-old son of ex-King Leopold of Belgium, was eliminated in the third round of the Pollok Club course.

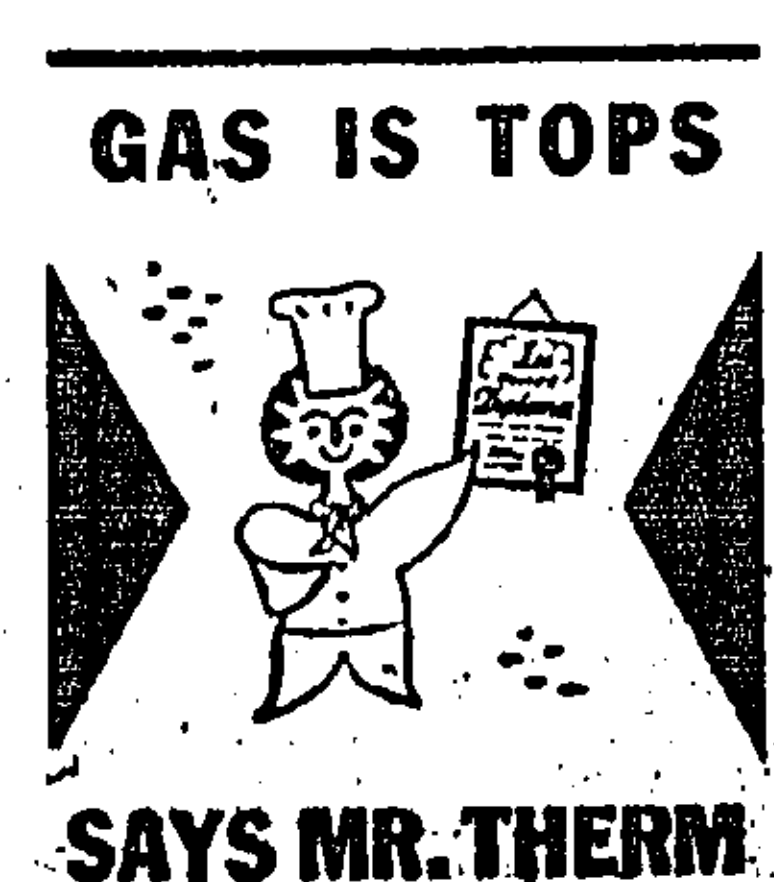

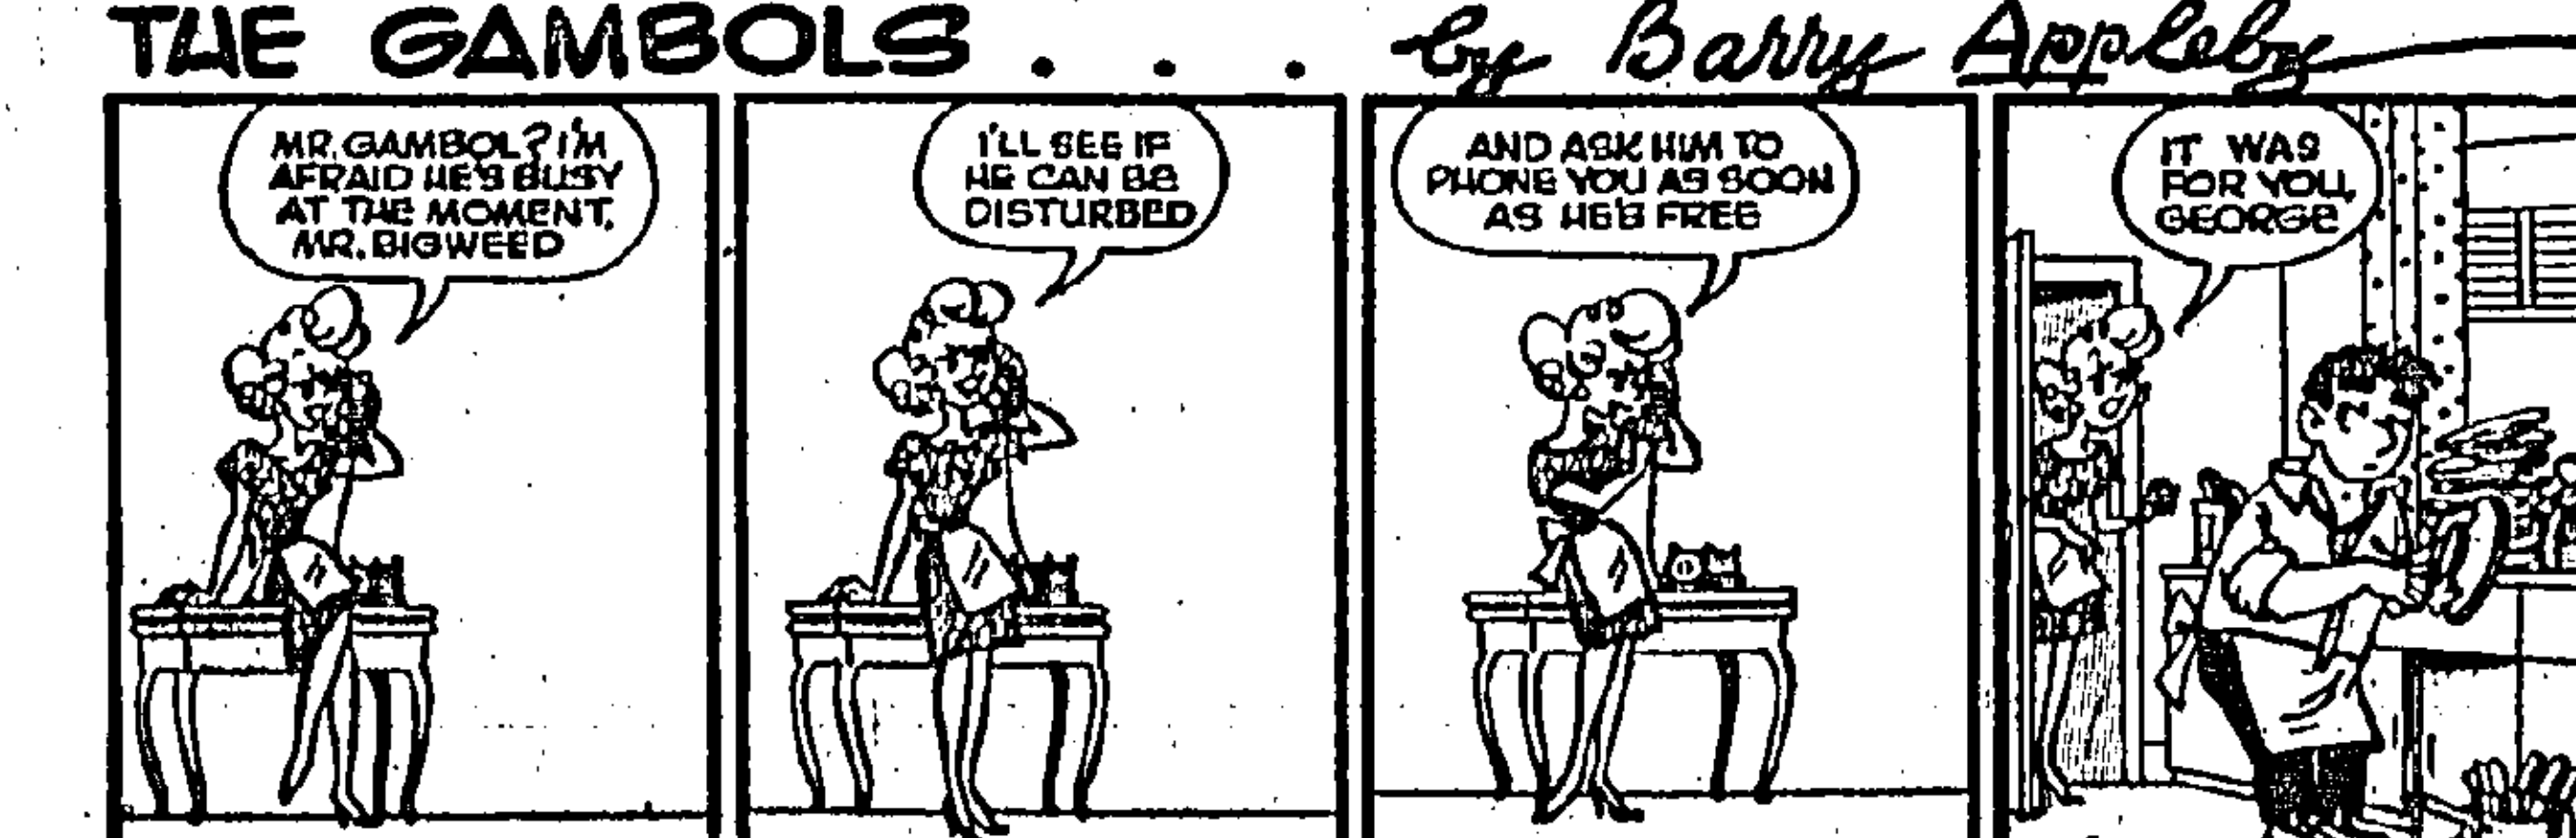

The dark, handsome young Prince, a useful player, was beaten 5 and 4 by England's powerful international boy captain, Richard Langridge, who is fancied to win the title.

Davey Moore Retains World Boxing Title

HOGAN BASSEY FAILS TO ANSWER THE BELL AT BEGINNING OF 11th ROUND

Los Angeles, Aug. 19.

World featherweight boxing champion, Davey Moore, from Springfield, Ohio, made a successful first title defence tonight, when he knocked out former champion, Hogan (Kid) Bassey, in the 11th round of a scheduled 15-round bout.

The 27-year-old challenger from Nigeria was unable to answer the bell for the 11th round. His right eye was closed after being the target of Moore's powerful left. It was cut and bleeding freely.

Although the fight was stopped by his corner, it was ruled a knockout under California boxing laws by referee Frankie Van.

Moore, showing all the coolness and confidence of a true champion, appeared to grow stronger as the fight wore on — using his speedy left hook mostly to the head to run up a point-margin.

Hurt Right Hand

Bassey said he hurt his right hand during the fifth round, and was unable to close it completely after that.

"Without the right, I was not at my best," he said as tears streamed down his cheeks immediately after the bout.

"Yes, without that right, I agreed to give up the bout."

At the end of the 10th, Bassey was reeling against the ropes as the result of Moore's two-fisted charges.

Bassey opened strongly in the 10th, but it was his last gasp. He scored with a right and a telling left to Moore's head shortly after the opening bell and the champion appeared to give ground.

But Moore was only biding his time and broke into what seemed almost to be a cavalry charge, bowling the African with rights and lefts to the head as he chased him around the ring.

Bassey tried to cover up, showing only his elbows to the relentless champion, who broke through the guard to score with a hard left to the mouth. Just before he had Bassey backing onto the ropes as the round ended.

Moore, who weighed the featherweight maximum of 126 pounds, bettered the job he did on Bassey in winning the title here last March 18. That time it took him until the 13th round.

Bassey was unable to continue in the first bout because of bad cuts about both eyes.

Stronger

Moore, who had trouble making the weight limit early in the day, was obviously stronger than the 125-pound Bassey. The champion bullied his opponent in the clinches, took his head shake and came back for more and more.

The fight opened on a quiet note with both tiny battlers sparing straight up in the middle of the ring. Blood was trickling from a scratch on the side of Bassey's left eye as the first round ended but this did not appear to bother him.

Moore boxed carefully in the second and third rounds, as Bassey continued as the aggressor with flicking lefts and rights to the head.

In the fourth round, both loosened up a bit. Bassey caught Moore with a good left to the face and knocked him off balance. The champion was unhurt and came back with a hard one-two combination to Bassey's head.

At this point, as they came together, Moore seemed to throw a shoulder block which sent Bassey down on the seat of his black trunks. Van helped him to his feet and it was not counted as a knock-down.

Head Attack

In the fifth, Moore lunged after Bassey from the bell, landing quickly with repeating lefts. Bassey bounced back hard with an overhand right to Moore's head — a punch that was a real bomb. Although the champion obviously felt it, it failed to slow him and he came back with a head attack.

The sixth round was fairly even, but Moore steadily gained the edge as the fight wore to its end.

A crowd of approximately 8,000 was on hand in Olympic Auditorium paying an estimated gate of $50,000 with another $40,000 for the national TV rights. Each fighter gets 30 per cent of the net. —UPI.

RONNIE DAWSON IS WORLD'S BEST HOOKER

He Shows That Skill Counts In Rugby

By DEREK JOHN

Salute Ronnie Dawson, the man who has shown that skill does count for something in rugby. With so much shove-and-push passing for top-class rugby these days, and getting results, the game was in danger of becoming almost solely a matter of brute force and accurate penalty kicking.

Now Dawson has taken a hand. He is a Dublin architect. More important, as far as rugby is concerned, he is captain and hooker of the British Lions team touring New Zealand.

Dawson's selection as hooker was greeted with raised eyebrows and more than one chuckle in New Zealand. Twelve stone seven pounds wasn't reckoned to present nearly enough beef for the job.

But Dawson had taken the trouble to study rugby as well as to play it. He has researched the game with painstaking thoroughness. To help his studies, he has played in every position to get first-hand experience of their different problems.

Can Beat Record

Now, through his brain, Dawson has earned the New Zealanders the title of Best Hooker in the World.

For the Lions, are making skill pay to such an extent that they have averaged 27 points a game. If they can keep it up, they will beat the record of 20 points a match achieved by the 1905 all-conquering All Blacks who toured Britain under the command of Dave Gallaher.

And with the loyalty which Dawson's captaincy and play inspires from his men, the Lions seem capable of maintaining their standard. But more important than records is the hope that Dawson's lead will be followed more generally in Britain and in the rest of the rugby-playing world.

I don't ask anyone to copy his ideas. My plea is that more players should think more about the game.

O'DELL PITCHES ORIOLES TO 3-1 WIN OVER CHISOX

Chicago, Aug. 19.

Billy O'Dell checked the pennant-chasing Chicago White Sox on five hits over eight innings today to pitch the Baltimore Orioles to a 3-1 victory against the American League leaders.

The Oriole southpaw, getting his seventh victory, weathered a spell of wildness in the first frame when he walked two batters after one out. He was working on his first shutout of the season when Sherm Lollar hit his 2-1 pitch for his 18th homer in the eighth inning.

Jerry Walker came on in the ninth for the Orioles and retired the White Sox in order.

The Orioles spread three runs over the first three innings, all off Bob Shaw, who lost his fourth game in 10 decisions.

Billy Klaus opened the game with a walk and moved up on Bob Niemann's single. Both advanced on an infield out and scored when Bob Boyd singled through the middle.

BENARD JOY PINPOINTS PROBLEM OF SOCCER'S POOLS PAY-OUT

This FA—League Gulf Looks Explosive

"The greatest happening in football since the Football League was founded in 1888." That is the description by League president Joe Richards of the payment by the Football Pools to the League for the use of their fixtures.

The sum, which is a guaranteed minimum of £245,000 a year for 10 years, makes the League the most powerful sporting body in the world.

This increase in strength comes at a time when the League are seeking to wrest from the Football Association the governing body of the game, greater control over their own organisation.

It follows England's disastrous close season tour when we were defeated by Brazil, Peru and British clubs. —Wolves, Hearts and Ards— to survive one round of the European Cup last season emphasises that at a club level, too, the standard of our football needs drastic improvement.

Vibrant

I have just conducted a nation-wide investigation, consulting administrators of the League and FA, managers, directors and players. Everywhere, the professional game is vibrant with the knowledge that we are on the verge of great things.

The League now have a unique opportunity of creating something far-sighted and worthwhile for the good of the game.

Yet, at the same time, I discovered an apprehension that the money could lead to disastrous results. There are many demanding a share. It is easy to make a false step.

That Boy

If the Pools money is used by the League in a struggle for power with the FA it would split football as basically as did Rugby schoolboy. William Webb Ellis when he picked up the ball and ran with it over a century ago.

To keep alive struggling clubs like Southport, Crewe and Aldershot would be futile. It would be an equal disservice if the money inflated the transfer fees Manchester United and Arsenal can afford from £45,000 to £50,000.

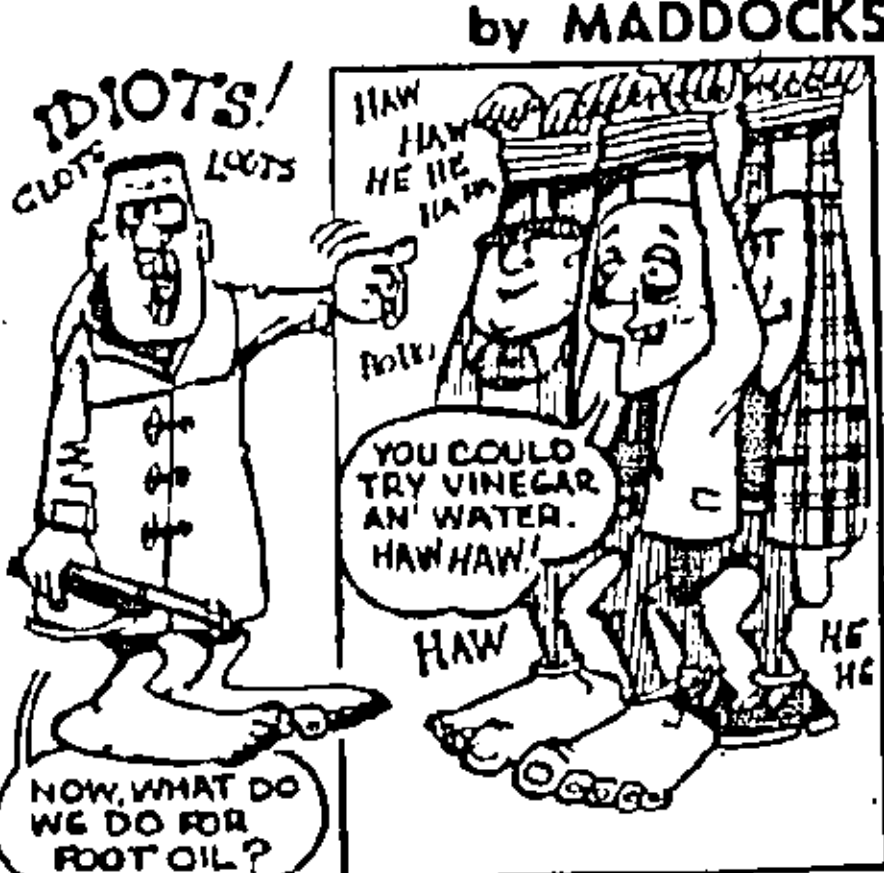

The easiest mistake to make at the moment is to ignore the public, from whom the money originates. Their demand for better football and greater comfort must be prime considerations.

Rocky Marciano Denies Report

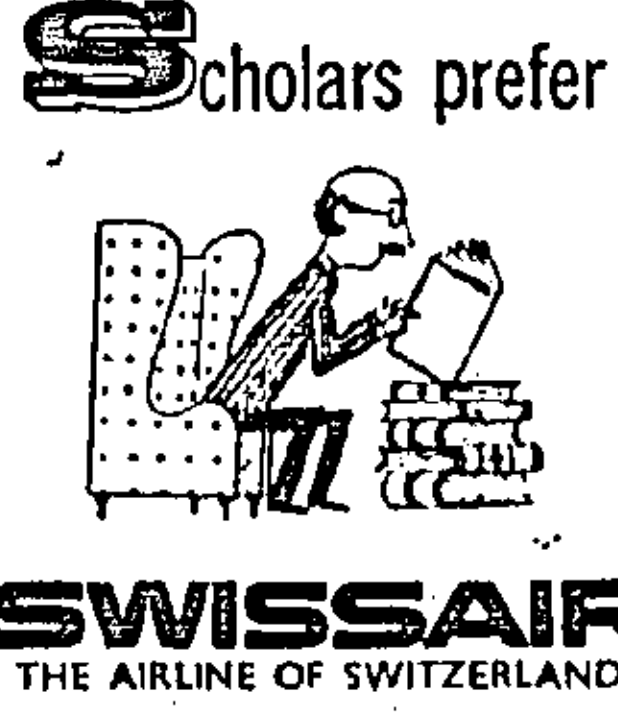

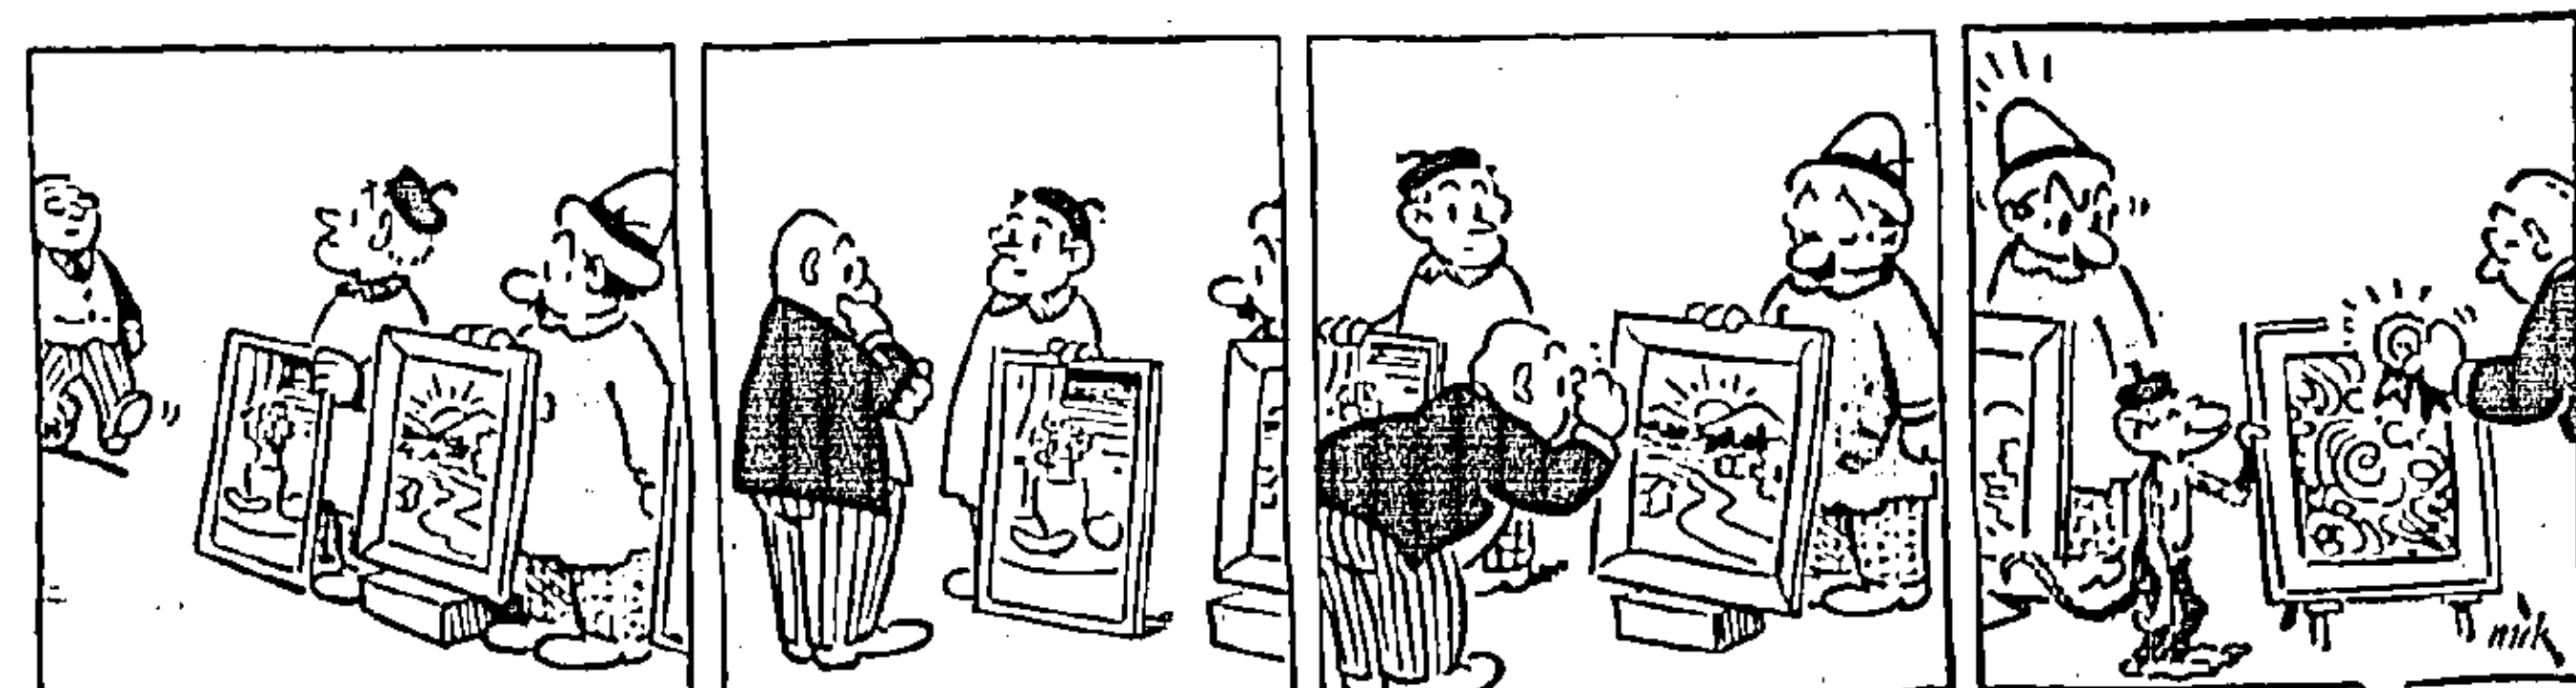

Miami, Aug. 19. Former world heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano today denied a report published by an American magazine that he will meet Sweden's Ingemar Johansson, current champion, in a title bout next June.

"It's untrue," Marciano said. "I have no definite plans about returning to the ring. The only offers that I have received have been in newspaper stories, although I must say a lot of promoters are getting awfully friendly." —AFP.

FIREFLOAT LAUNCHED AT KOWLOON DOCKS

The Hongkong Fire Brigade's latest firefloat, was launched this morning from a slipway at Kowloon Docks, Hunghom. There was no official ceremony, as the vessel has not yet been fully completed.

It was learned that the twin-diesel engines are to be installed soon, and a senior fire officer said he expected the float to be in commission in approximately two months. The new float joins the Sir Alexander Grantham as the Brigade's marine fighting force.

Printed and published by TERENCE GORDON NEWLANDS PEACOCK for and on behalf of South China Morning Post Limited at 1-3 Wyndham Street, City of Victoria in the Colony of Hongkong.

It takes the place of the previous Fire No. 2, which is being scrapped. A number of high-ranking fire officers and officials of the Kowloon Docks watched the Fire No. 2 slip into the water amidst a huge cloud of fire-cracker smoke.

The vessel is of welded and riveted steel construction with aluminium alloy superstructure. She is divided into six watertight compartments. Her two Ruston Paxman diesel engines will give her an approximate speed of 11½ knots, which is slightly faster than the Sir Alexander Grantham.

There are three fire monitors, each with a mechanically operated elevation and traverse gear. Two will discharge foam and water, while the third, aft, will discharge only water.

Her Crew
She will have a complement of an officer and ten crew members. Sleeping accommodation has been provided for all crewmen, and an officer's cabin is situated in the forward deck-house.

The firefloat's dimensions are: length (overall) 82 feet, breadth, 10 feet 9 inches, and depth, nine feet nine inches.
